Nevada History

Welcome to Nevada, also known as the Battle Born State and the Sagebrush State. We are the most mountainous state in the contiguous United States, and also the driest.

After Lake Lahontan receded, many Native American tribes inhabited the land that would one day become Nevada. These tribes included the Paiute, Shoshone, Quoeech, Washoe, and Walapai.

When the Spaniards began exploring America in the 1700s, they claimed Nevada as part of their empire. Following the Mexican War of Independence in 1821, the territory of Nevada became a territory of their Alta California province, before the area was claimed by the United States in 1848. Many explorers passed through the area in these years, including Mormon missionaries who organized travel stations for miners on their way to the California Gold Rush. The "Washoe code" was established to help settle land disputes, but as religious tensions grew, the Mormons left the area in 1857.

A few years later, in the area that would one day become Virginia City, the Grosh brothers and Henry Comstock stumbled upon silver. Due to the group's lack of resources to process the silver, a "Rush to Washoe" ensued. Miners from the area surged in, claiming rights to the land and future fortunes. It was the first major silver discovery in the U.S., the one that ended the California Gold Rush, and yielded more than $500 million of silver and gold ore in its first decades.

The silver would come in handy. During the Civil War, the land of Nevada supplied silver to finance the conflict. President Abraham Lincoln called for the miners to form a state so they could be formally recognized for their part in the war (and help him win the vote against George McClellan in the upcoming Presidential election). After a failed first attempt in 1863, a state constitution was agreed upon in the summer of 1864, and in September, the territory of Nevada sent its new constitution by train to Washington D.C. for the November deadline to become a state. The copy didn't make it, but that didn't stop Nevada. The territorial governor, James Nye, sent the constitution by telegraph at the end of October. It is still the longest and costliest telegraph ever sent, taking two days to transmit 16,543 words and costing $4,303. On October 31, 1864, one day before the deadline, Nevada became the 36th state of the Union and helped Lincoln win re-election.

By 1872, mining was so prolific that a legal body was set up in Southern Nevada to legislate the land claims and usage. People from all walks of life came into the state, working a mine until it was exhausted, and then moving on, creating a boom-and-bust cycle through the early 1900s.

In 1931, Nevada legalized gambling, and it would become a stable source of income for the state. It also led to Las Vegas growing from 5,000 residents in 1930 to nearly two million in 2008. At the same time, residency requirements were lowered to six weeks in Reno, leading to an increase of residents seeking a fast divorce.

During World War II, much of Nevada's land was handed to the military. Multiple bases and test sites were built, including the infamous Area 51 and the atomic bomb testing area near Frenchman Flat.

Today, Nevada ships $11 billion worth of goods across the globe, including gold, gaming tokens, and coffee. Gambling brings in just as much revenue, yet across the state, there are more than 100 ghost towns. From the villages of the northeast to the lights of Reno and Las Vegas, nothing rings truer: home means Nevada.

Getting Around Reno

Welcome to Reno and Sparks

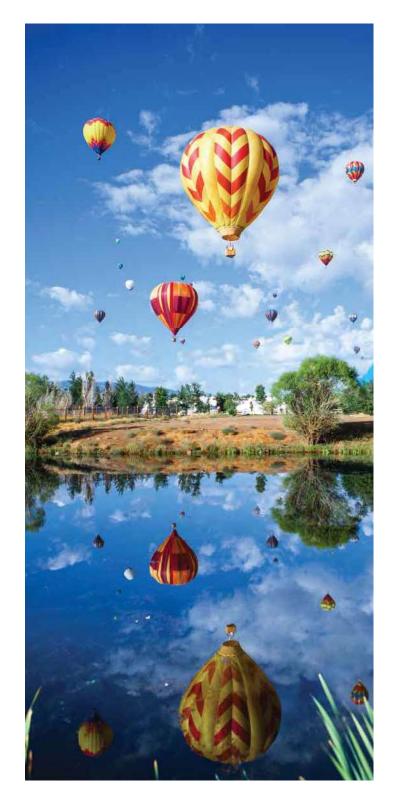

It's no secret – we love this place. The breathtaking Reno/Sparks/Lake Tahoe area goes beyond just being an exciting gaming destination. It also offers a probusiness climate, excellent quality of life, and world-class vacation and recreation amenities. In each city, there is an extraordinary mix of history; culture; world-class ski and golf resorts; 24-hour gaming and entertainment; a mild climate with four distinct seasons; a healthy, diverse economy; and community spirit as strong as ever.

Did we mention how beautiful the area is? The vistas include chains of high-peaked mountains surrounding the region in every direction, from the high desert hills to valleys covered with deciduous and evergreen trees. Residents enjoy the Truckee River flowing casually through the heart of the city, past an eclectic mix of stately manors, quaint churches, sleek high rises, city parks, and casinos. Shopping malls and new residential developments canvas the city limits, nestled against mountains that offer endless outdoor recreation, and cradle the magnificent Lake Tahoe.

Land and Location

At 39.53° north of the equator and 119.82° west of the prime meridian, Reno covers 148.92 sq. km. of land and 0.51 sq. km. of water. It is 4,498 feet above sea level.

As a newcomer to the Reno/Sparks area, the mountains and the small-town feel may surprise you. Marvel at the brick architecture of some of Reno's downtown buildings, the frontier independence, or the contrast of the river floating tranquilly against the neon lights. Truckee Meadows—the community at large surrounded by greens, blues, and fluorescent colors—will surprise you as a great place to live, work, and raise a family.

Reno's Temperate Character

At 4,500 feet altitude, the Reno area offers four distinct seasons with few extremes. Average temperatures range from winter lows in the 20s to summer highs in the 90s. Low humidity characterizes the area, making the cool days seem not so cold, and the warm days not so hot. Rain is scarce (fewer than eight inches on average annually), as are cloudy days. Snow, however, is certain (23.5 inches on average per year), though it tends to melt by late afternoon in the valleys. Here, the sun shines more than 300 days a year, providing warm days, cool nights, and blue skies.

Business Breaks and Benefits

Tax benefits (no corporate, personal income, unitary, inventory, or franchise taxes), accessibility to western markets, transportation hubs, abundance of available industrial/office/commercial space, advanced telecommunications infrastructure, business friendly regulations, and high quality of life make Reno/Sparks/Lake Tahoe an extremely attractive place to do business. Michelin North America, Microsoft Licensing, John Deere Company, Kal Kan, Amazon.com, Intuit, and Cisco Systems are just a few examples of companies who have recently chosen to expand in or move into our region. They join long-standing companies, including Ralston Foods, International Game Technology, and R. R. Donnelley and Sons, in calling northern Nevada their home.

The Smarts

The tremendous resources of the University of Nevada, Reno (UNR), Small Business Development Center, and Truckee Meadows Community College (TMCC) provide a wide variety of assistance to the business community and opportunities for collaboration. All major fields of study and many advanced degree programs are provided at UNR, a fully accredited state university. TMCC offers numerous training courses and will customize programs for individual businesses.

A History of Reno and Sparks

Lake's Crossing was the first name for the Reno area. It was a camping place for the travelers passing through. In 1859, Charles Fuller built a log bridge across the Truckee River and charged a fee to those who passed over it on their way to Virginia City and the gold recently discovered there. Fuller also provided gold-seekers with a place to rest, purchase a meal, and exchange information with other prospectors. In 1861, Myron Lake purchased Fuller's bridge, and with the money from the tolls, bought more land, where he constructed a gristmill, livery stable, and kiln.

In May of 1868, when the Central Pacific Railroad reached Nevada from Sacramento, Lake made sure that his crossing was included in its path by deeding a portion of his land to Charles Crocker (an organizer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company), who promised to build a depot at Lake's Crossing. On May 13, 1868, the town site of Reno (named after Civil War General Jesse Reno) was officially established. Lake's remaining land was divided into lots and auctioned off to businessmen and homebuilders. There were 100 houses built within a month.

The Lake Mansion is one of Reno's oldest surviving homes. Built in 1877 by William Marsh and purchased by Lake in 1879, the Lake Mansion originally stood at the corner of California and Virginia Streets. In 1971, it was moved to save it from demolition, and today the Lake Mansion serves as a small museum on the corner of Arlington and Court Street.

At the turn of the century, Nevada Senator Francis Newlands played a prominent role in the passage of the Reclamation Act of 1902. The Newlands Reclamation Project diverted Truckee River water to farmland east of Reno, prompting the growth of the town of Fallon. The residence of Francis Newlands, built in 1889, is one of five National Historic Landmarks in Nevada.

Also during 1902, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company (SPRC) straightened its tracks for a shorter route, bypassing Wadsworth and its roundhouse and maintenance shops for the railroad. The SPRC ordered a city built four miles east of Reno in the swamplands and ranches, which would become Sparks, and relocated their Wadsworth employees to the area with the incentive of a 50' x 140' tract to call their own.

Because Nevada's economy was tied to the mining industry and its inevitable ups and downs, the state had to find other means of economic support during the hard times. Reno earned the title "Sin City" because it hosted several legal brothels, was the scene of illegal underground gambling, and offered quick and easy divorces. Northern Nevada became well known for meeting logging and agricultural needs.

Nystrom House, built in 1875 for Washoe County Clerk John Shoemaker, is also significant for its role as a boardinghouse during Reno's divorce trade in the 1920s. The Riverside Hotel, designed by Frederick DeLongchamps, was built in 1927 specifically for divorceseekers and boasted an international reputation.

That same year, in celebration of the completion of the Lincoln Highway (Highway 50) and the Victory Highway (Highway 40), the State of California constructed the California Building as a gift for the Transcontinental Exposition, held at Idlewild Park.

The Mapes Hotel was built in 1947 and opened for business on December 17 of that year. It was the first high-rise built to combine a hotel and casino, providing the prototype for modern hotel/casinos. The building went vacant on December 17, 1982, 35 years to the day after it opened. The Reno Redevelopment Agency acquired the property in 1996 and sought a developer to revitalize the building. After four years of failed attempts to find a cost-effective way to save the structure, the Mapes was demolished on January 30, 2000.

This brief history of Reno and Sparks highlights only a few of the many treasures that make up the unique history of "The Biggest Little City in the World." To own an historic property is to own a piece of a shared history. Because the craftsmanship and fabrication processes that created them are no longer available, historic structures are non-renewable resources and rely upon the efforts of their owners to ensure that they survive into the future.

Welcome to Fernley

In 1850, when the Territory of Utah was created by Congress, the area that is now Fernley was located on its far western border. A decade later, President Buchanan signed the bill to create the Nevada Territory when the Comstock Lode was discovered.

Twenty years later, as the gold rush of Nevada was winding down, the state turned to farming, lumber, railroads, and water projects. The Newlands Project, a Federal Bureau of Reclamation project, sought to construct a canal from the Truckee River to the Lahontan Reservoir. The 32-mile canal passed right through Canal Township, a developing agricultural community that would one day become Fernley. In 1905, the railroad came through and added a stop at the township. The station was named Fernley on the official railroad guide, supposedly named after a Dr. Fernley who worked on the railroad.

In the years that followed, a post office was constructed (1908) and a better railroad stop was built (1914). This Fernley Depot was used until 1985, when it was relocated by the Preservation Society to Main Street. The area would become an official city on July 1st, 2001. Today, Fernley boasts 19,700 residents and offers Fortune 500 employers abundant housing and world-class recreation, including boating, water skiing, camping, fishing, and swimming. In Fernley, there are many community parks that have facilities, including a lighted tennis court, basketball courts, skate park, lighted baseball and softball fields, and rodeo grounds. Off-road adventures include a professional ATV and Motocross race track, the Reno/ Fernley Raceway, and a paintball gaming facility. The 18hole Desert Lakes Golf Course provides a golfer's dream with a clubhouse to service any quality of life you desire. The fun never ends—welcome to Fernley.

Fallon History

At the turn of the 20th century, Fallon was a dusty crossroads referred to as "Jim's Town" by the local Native Americans. Jim Richards operated his store very near Mike and Eliza Fallon's ranch house and post office, which had been built in 1896.

After President Theodore Roosevelt established the United States Reclamation Service (USRS), Fallon's dusty crossroads would never be the same. Work began on the Truckee River with the building of Derby Diversion Dam in June of 1903. Construction of the 36-miles-long Truckee Canal was begun in 1905. Lahontan Dam was completed in 1914, and homesteaders flocked to the area, drawn by a national USRS advertising campaign.

At the same time, Mike Fallon's ranch was sold in lots and developed into a growing community. In 1903, State Senator Williams pushed through legislation that formally moved the county seat from Stillwater to the new town of Fallon. Construction of a courthouse for the new county seat was completed in 1903, and many Stillwater businesses moved to Fallon.

Fallon was officially incorporated in 1908. In 1912, Fallon residents were thrilled when electricity, generated below the Lahontan Dam, reached the city. Over the coming years, Fallon would make its claim on the nation, selling "Hearts-O-Gold" cantaloupes, alfalfa and turkeys, some of which were even sold to the White House for their Thanksgiving feasts.

In 1942, Fallon became the home of the Fallon Naval Air Station. Since then, the base has become a full-fledged Naval Air Station specializing in pilot training.

From agriculture to irrigation to military station, Fallon is the "Oasis of Nevada." Fallon and its surrounding countryside are truly lush agricultural and cultural havens in the rural Nevada desert.

Virginia City History

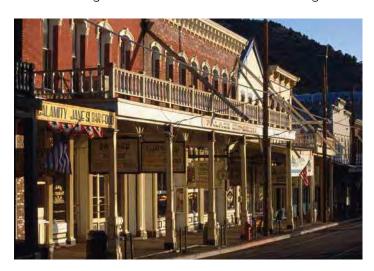

The 19th-century mining bonanza that created Virginia City began in June 1859, when Henry Comstock and fellow miners discovered a rich deposit of silver ore that would be called the Comstock Lode. Prospectors from around the world came to the area, building churches, homes, schools, and saloons. The riches helped finance the U.S.

government during the Civil War, producing more than $300 million in mineral deposits.

Notable icons of the Comstock Lode include John Mackay, founder of the Nevada's School of Mines at the University of Nevada, Reno; engineer Adolph Sutro, who became Mayor of San Francisco; banker William Sharon; entrepreneur George Hearst; the famous Madame Julia Bulette; and author Mark Twain.

In 1875, a fire spread down the streets of the city and filled the mines with flames and smoke. Restoring the city took less than a year, and involved the reconstruction of many famous buildings. In February 2009, the National Trust for Historic Preservation awarded Virginia City national recognition as a destination worth visiting.

A History of Lake Tahoe

Geological Formation

The Native American word "tahoe" means "big water."

The Lake Tahoe Basin is a masterpiece of nature, formed about five to ten million years ago by the rising and falling of the land due to the shifting of geologic faults.

Tremendous forces resulted In the development of two principal parallel faults—the Carson Range to the east, and the Sierra Nevada to the west. The V-shaped fault blocks that rose between formed the Lake Tahoe Basin.

Later, about two million years ago, volcanic activity followed and further reshaped the landscape of the region. Lava flowing from Mt. Pluto formed a barrier across the basin's northeastern outlet, creating a natural dam across Lake Tahoe's original outlet, the Truckee River. Water from the snowfall and streams gradually filled the Lake Tahoe Basin more than 600 feet above its present lake level. Eventually, a new outlet eroded through the northeastern lava dam, creating the present path of the Lower Truckee River, the only outlet of the lake. Then an ice age developed, and huge glaciers grew in the surrounding mountains, gradually moving down the canyons on the western side of the lake. The glaciers scoured away loose rock and reshaped the canyons into the broad, U-shaped valleys of Emerald Bay, Fallen Leaf Lake, and Cascade Lake.

Today, the highest point in the Tahoe Basin is Freel Peak at 10,881 feet. The deepest part of Lake Tahoe is near Crystal Bay, measuring a depth of 1,645 feet.

Tahoe History

Tahoe's shores have attracted populations over thousands of years. The first humans to enjoy the Lake Tahoe Basin were the indigenous people known as the Washoe. For at least 6,000 years, the Washoe have made their home in the eastern Sierra Nevada mountain range and the Great Basin within, seeking the cooler temperatures, abundant fish and plentiful game of Lake Tahoe.

The Washoes considered Lake Tahoe "the Jewel of the Sierra" and birthplace of their heritage. Today they are known as the Washoe Tribe of Nevada and California.

Sadly, the Washoe homeland nearly perished during the Comstock Lode silver and logging boom from the 1860s to the early 1880s. The natural resources of the region are still recovering from the mass deforestation that occurred during this relatively brief time.

The first recorded sighting of Lake Tahoe by a non-Native American was by John C. Fremont in February of 1844. His exploration party was guided by the legendary scout Christopher "Kit" Carson. The party first viewed part of Lake Tahoe when they arrived at the top of Red Lake Peak, 10,651 feet above sea level, at what is now Carson Pass, 20 miles southwest of South Lake Tahoe.

In 1848, Carson carved a trail over what is now called the Carson Pass. This trail became the main east/west route from Utah to California and was known as the Mormon-Emigrant Trail. For many years thereafter, the area was virtually ignored. In 1859, the Comstock Lode was discovered in Virginia City, Nevada. During the 1860s, Tahoe became the lively center of commerce involving the silver mines in Virginia City and the Central Pacific Railroad, which was pushing over the Sierra toward the town of Truckee.

Wood was needed to supply the mines, the new boomtowns, and the railroad. An extensive logging empire was established on the east shore of the lake from Incline Village to Glenbrook. The loggers clear-cut the entire shoreline until both the silver mines and the demand for timber petered out in the late 1870s to early 1880s. The scars of the logging industry remained for decades.

By the 1890s, Lake Tahoe had become a popular retreat for the wealthy from San Francisco, Sacramento, and Virginia City. At the time, the only industry that showed promise was tourism, so the rush to build resorts began.

From the turn of the 19th century, small groups of diverse people discovered the lake's beauty and resources. Native Americans, explorers, early entrepreneurs, Basque sheepherders, Chinese laborers, and society's elite each contributed to the foundation of Tahoe's heritage.

The California state legislature officially named Lake Tahoe in 1945.

Lake Tahoe Today

Tahoe residents are extremely proud of their lake. Sooner or later, you will hear all of the following facts and bragging rights.

Surrounded by mountains, the present-day lake sits in a valley at an elevation of 6,229 feet. It is the highest lake of its size in the United States. It is the third deepest lake in North America and the 10th deepest in the world.

Lake Tahoe is 22 miles in length and 12 miles in width. It covers a surface area of 191 square miles. The consistently beautiful shoreline is 71 miles—42 in California, 29 in Nevada.

This breathtakingly blue lake is so clear that in some places objects can be seen to depths of 75 feet. The lake is so blue because the thin, clear mountain air allows the pure, crystalline water to reflect the blue sky above. The lake can also appear red during sunsets or gray-black during storms.

The average annual rainfall in the Lake Tahoe Basin is 8.3 inches, and the average annual snowfall is 216 inches, or 18 feet, for a total annual precipitation of 30 inches. (The ski areas average 30 to 50 feet of snow per year.) Most of the snow and rain falls directly into the lake or drains through lakeside marshes and meadows that act as water filtering systems, preserving the purity of the water.

Sixty-three streams flow into Lake Tahoe, but the Truckee River is the only one that flows out, past Reno and into Pyramid Lake.

The maximum depth is 1,645 feet, near Crystal Bay, and the average depth is 989 feet. The watershed of Lake Tahoe is 519 square miles. The lake holds over 39 trillion gallons of water, enough to cover a flat area the size of California to a depth of 14 inches. If drained, it would take 700 years to refill.

Lake Tahoe loses much of its water to evaporation. If the water that evaporates from the lake every 24 hours could be recovered, it would supply the daily requirements of a city the size of Los Angeles.

The maximum surface water temperature is 68° F and the minimum is 41° F. Below 600 feet, the lake's water is extremely cold, staying at 39° F year-round.

Lake Tahoe never freezes, because the huge volume of lake water is always in motion. Each winter, the cold water on the surface sinks, while warm water rises from the deep. Some protected inlets like Emerald Bay have been covered with a layer of ice at times.

FAQs About Lake Tahoe

Granite - Peaks and Pieces

The glorious peaks that surround Lake Tahoe are mountains of granite. This light gray, medium-to coarsegrained rock is prevalent in the Sierra Nevada Mountains, along with other igneous rocks and metamorphic slate.

Granite is composed of two light-colored minerals, quartz, and feldspar. Some granite appears to be salt-and-pepper in appearance due to the presence of darker-colored minerals such as iron and magnesium.

Much of the sandy, sterile soil in most of the region is composed primarily of decomposed granite rock. It is coarse in texture, low in plant nutrients, and high in erosion potential. Fortunately, much of the sandy soil in the region is covered by a "duff" of fallen pine tree needles and decomposing natural materials. This covering helps cushion and absorb rainfall, thus slowing the speed of natural erosion.

Annual precipitation is scarcest from September to October. The winter months typically bring snow, though it tends to melt by late afternoon in the valleys. Here, the sun shines about 250 days a year, providing warm days, cool nights, and blue skies. The colder months can be chilly, but they warm up as the sun breaks through the clouds.

A History of Incline Village

The discovery of Lake Tahoe goes back hundreds of years to the first Native Americans who called the lake their summer home. In much the same way, John C. Fremont discovered the lake for himself in 1844. The lake was used by logging companies beginning in the mid-1800s. The north shore (now Incline Village and Crystal Bay), treasured for its lumber, was reduced to a valley of stumps, flumes, and rotting debris. While visitors still traveled to the lake, there was a general distaste for the barren lands that had been created by logging.

As more tourists traveled to discover Lake Tahoe for themselves, roads were put in to connect the shores. By 1935, George Whittell bought the barren land that would one day become Incline Village and Crystal Bay. He constructed his first summer home, the Thunderbird Lodge, and thus began the building of Incline Village.

In 1960, the area of Incline Village was acquired by the Crystal Bay Development Company. It was then that the planned community of Incline Village came together. Instead of summer homes, a city was established with roads, schools, grocery stores, banks, restaurants, and more. It was designed as a resort area where residents could dwell.

As the years passed, Incline Village grew. The first school was constructed in 1964, followed by Incline High School. More renown was brought to Incline Village with the production of Bonanza, the iconic Western television show. The series was filmed at Incline Village's Ponderosa Ranch and drew in tourists from around the country. One man, Bill Anderson, was a fan of the show and an equipment surplus dealer. He moved to Incline and brought about the Incline Riding Stables in conjunction with Bonanza.

In the late 1900s, the area around Lake Tahoe, including Incline Village, was commissioned as a state park and later a national park. Activists strived to preserve Lake Tahoe's color and the area's health. While the community of Incline Village continues to grow, there is an ongoing focus on preservation, recreation, and advancement. Today's residents come from all walks of life and around the world. There are corporate executives, teachers, carpenters, artists, writers, celebrities and summer visitors. From the families watching the sunsets on the lake's waves to the snow chasers on the hills, they all share one thing in common: Incline Village is home.

As a member of the Mountain West Conference, the University of Nevada has six men's sports teams and ten women's sports teams, all with their own successes and victories. Year after year, UNR student-athletes combined win the conference's Community Service Challenge with the most hours donated to helping their community. Below is a snapshot of a few of the university's sports accolades.

Football

The football team, currently coached by Jay Norvell, plays at Mackay Stadium. They participate in the NCAA's Division I (FBS for football) and in the Mountain West Conference. The 2010 season arguably saw Nevada at their best, stunning Boise State 34-31 and stripping the Broncos of a possible shot at the national chnampionship game. Since 2020, Nevada Football has been to 13 bowl games, winning seven, and since 1945, nearly 60 Nevada football players have been drafted by the NFL.

Basketball

The Nevada men's basketball team has made the NCAA tournament nine times. In March 2004, the team advanced to the Sweet Sixteen for the first time in school history, followed by repeat visits in 2005, 2018, and 2019, when they tied for second place. The women's basketball team has played in eight tournament games in the last three years and reached the quarterfinals of the Mountain West conference. Twenty-four players from Nevada have made it to the NBA, including Javale McGee, who has three championships under his belt.

The 2008 team finished with a national ranking of 21 in the USA Today poll and 20 in the ESPN poll—however, they ended up losing in the regional championship game to UCLA. Nevada advanced to the postseason playoffs in 2018 and 2019.

Baseball

The baseball team has appeared in the NCAA regionals five times between 1994 and 2021, finishing the 1994 season ranked 19th in the country. They have compiled a record of 5-8 in NCAA games, losing to Stanford in the finals of the Palo Alto regional in 1999.

Volleyball

The volleyball team has qualified for the NCAA tournament five times between 1998 and 2005, all coming from at-large selections. In recent years, players have received accolades for their academics and community service, with the team averaging 7,000 donated hours a season.

Soccer

The soccer team won its first WAC tournament title in 2006 and qualified for its first NCAA tournament since the program's inception in 2000. Nevada faced Fresno State in the championship match, and after 110 minutes of scoreless play, the two teams went into a shootout where Nevada prevailed 4-2 in penalty kicks. In the years since, Wolf Pack student-athletes continued to earn Academic All-Mountain West accolades.

Swimming/Diving

The swimming and diving team's long history includes the Alaw-Division II national title in 1979 and six conference championships since 1996. They won the Big West championship five years in a row from 1996 to 2000, won the WAC title for three years from 2007 to 2009, and were Mountain West Champions in 2016.

Rifle Team

The Nevada rifle team placed second in the 2004 NCAA championship, losing to national champion Alaska Fairbanks. As of 2018, when UNR disbanded the program, the team had attended seven consecutive NCAA playoffs and won more championships than any other sport at the university.

Retirement

The biggest factor for retirees moving to Reno is the affability of the area's residents. Next would be the beautiful scenery, mild climate and convenient transportation, says Cindy Thillippe, employment specialist with the American Association of Retired Persons.

"My husband and I have lived many places," Thillippe says, "but we always come back to Reno. People here are friendlier than any place on the West Coast." For most retirees, the low cost of living in the region is a deciding factor in their decision to move to the area.

"The business community is responsive to the needs of many seniors who continue to work in order to pay their bills," Thillippe says. "Even on a budget, there's an abundance of low-cost and free things to do in the Reno/ Sparks area."

There are also plenty of community services and state-ofthe-art health care facilities for seniors.

"One reason my father decided to move here from California after retirement," says Steve Waller, financial adviser with Great Basin Federal Credit Union, "is the wealth of senior programs. The area has the benefits of a small town lifestyle combined with the amenities and services of a large metropolitan area."

Waller says the main reason the Reno/Sparks area is an attractive retirement area is the lack of a state income tax. "From a financial standpoint, this is a huge factor for seniors," he says.

Hunting

Hunting in Nevada is a treat unto itself. With endless swaths of public land, towering alpine peaks, and low-lying basins, Nevada's environment is ideal for hunting many different types of game, some of which require a license to hunt, while others do not.

Unless you intend to use or sell the pelts/fur, you don't need a license to hunt ground squirrels, raccoons, coyotes, badgers, skunks, black-tailed jackrabbits, European starlings, and house sparrows. These are considered unprotected game.

Protected big game requires a hunting license to pursue. You can purchase your license from the Nevada Department of Wildlife at ndow.org and apply for tags in the spring of each year. Hunting seasons for big game are typically August to February, and you are often limited to one animal, assuming you draw a tag. Protected game in Nevada that require hunting licenses include elk, mule deer, black bears, pronghorn antelope, Rocky Mountain goats, mountain lions, Rocky Mountain bighorn sheep, and desert bighorn sheep.

When it comes to bird hunting, you'll need a hunting license, HIP number, and bird stamp. The license and HIP number can be obtained from the Nevada Department of Wildlife at ndow.org. Bird stamps can be purchased there as well or from your local sporting stores.

Upland game birds and waterfowl that require licenses include: chukar partridge, California and Gambel's quail, ruffed grouse, blue grouse, doves, Himalayan snowcock, wild turkeys, ducks, mergansers, geese, swans, coots, moorhens, and snipe.

In the state of Nevada, it is completely off-limits to hunt shorebirds, songbirds, hawks, ravens, owls, and bald eagles.

Hunters are allowed to pursue game between sunrise and sunset unless otherwise noted in the county. Hunting is prohibited in national parks, in cities, and in certain Bureau of Land Management areas. Hunting on tribal land also requires a permit. If a hunter is successful on a hunt, they must report their quarry, including the animal's gender, weight, and description via their tag. For a complete list of all regulations and rules, please go to ndow.org.

Hunting seasons rely heavily on the area, type of game, and weapon used, but open season for big game is typically August to February. Applications for tags are usually due in April, with drawings in March and June. Small game and upland bird seasons are typically in the fall as well.

Fishing

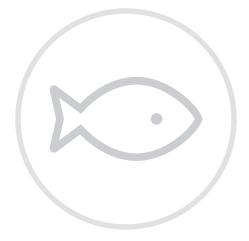

Need some peace and quiet, punctuated by pure excitement? Fishing is the sport for you. Nevada is blessed with a large network of lakes, rivers, and ponds that provide anglers with incredible fishing opportunities. From Lake Mead to Lake Tahoe to Lake Pyramid, from the Colorado River to the Truckee River to the Humboldt River, there is no shortage of fishing opportunities in the Silver State. In fact, Nevada is home to more than 200 lakes and reservoirs and 600 streams and rivers.

Any individual older than 12 who wishes to fish must have a fishing license, which can be purchased at a local sporting store or at ndow.org. Whether it's fly fishing, with rod and reel, spear, or bow and arrow, here are some of the fish you might run across in Nevada:

- Rainbow trout
- ▶ Brook trout
- ▶ Brown trout
- ► Cutthroat trout
- Rainbow cutthroat hybrid
- ▶ Bull trout

- Kokanee salmon
- ▶ Tiger trout
